WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

I have told you a great deal about my heart, but you have told me nothing about yours. Mine beats wildly whenever I see you go out on your round of afternoon visits. At other times it is normal. In other words, it has beat for you ever since I first saw you leave your office. I would know if yours does not beat for me.

I rose with dignity, not to say irritation, and replied:

"Do you mean to tell me that you have been fooling me all this time?"

"My heart is affected."

"For—for me only?"

Opposing currents struggled within me. I was vexed to have been treated like a—well, like a woman instead of a physician. Nevertheless I could not keep down a delicious sensation that I was loved. However, I maintained a professional stow.

"My time," I said curtly, "is as valuable when visiting one whose intention is to make a fool of me as a patient who needs me. I shall make you pay for this."

I strode out of the room. But I was too late. The fellow had caught me. I tried to stay away from him and keep him away from me. It was no use. The paws of the trap closed about me. I married him and lost the results of six years' hard work.

And yet, while I don't wish to discourage others of my sex from studying professions, I must admit that my life with my husband and my children has been in keeping with nature, and I have not regretted marriage.

MY UNAVAILABLE EDUCATION.

(Original.)

We women are handicapped in the professions by the fact that we may marry. It's like building on foundations that may crumble away. When a man chooses a career he knows that the more of a family he gets the more proficient he must be in his work. A woman knows that even a husband is liable to prevent her taking advantage of years of preparation.

Realizing this, I determined when I began to study medicine that I would never marry. My friends appeared doubtful, saying that I was too good looking to remain single. I put this down to flattery and pursued my studies, then took hospital work.

On coming out of the hospital I hung out my shingle in a quiet street, resolving to practice only among women and children. I hadn't been settled a week before I received a call from an old lady living directly opposite, who wished me to go over to her house and see her son.

"The poor boy," she said, "has always been strong and well till four or five days ago, when he had trouble with his heart. Do come and see him." Supposing from her words that her son was a boy, I went over. There, reclining on an easy chair, was a young man not less than twenty-five years old. He showed no outward signs of illness, his color being good, though when I took his hand to test his heart beat I found his pulse quite rapid.

asked him to give me his symptoms, which he did in these words:

"A few days ago I was looking out of my window. I remember the circumstances well. It was about 2 o'clock. A cart was lumbering up the street. You opened your front door and went out. Suddenly my heart, which had always beat regularly, began to jump and flutter. I fell back on this chair and waited for the unusual action to subside. It finally did so, but it returns every day and about the same time."

"Do you drink coffee?"

"Yes."

"Stop it at once."

"Liquors?"

"Occasionally."

"Stop them too."

"Smoke?"

"He smokes all the time," his mother put in.

"Stop smoking, but gradually—two cigars a day for awhile, then one and finally none."

He looked quite cut up, but said presently, "Well, seeing it's you, I'll do it, but there are other doctors in Christendom that could persuade me."

"That's the advantage of a woman physician," said the mother. "Men are dictatorial and unsympathetic."

I put my ear down on to the patient's chest to hear the beating of his heart. It certainly beat rapidly, but I could hear no sounds denoting any organic difficulty. I told him that his trouble was nervous and by following my directions he would soon be free from it. I went away not expecting to be called in again.

Within a week my patient's mother came over to say that her son, notwithstanding that he had followed my recommendations, had daily recurrences of his trouble. I asked her when they came on, and she said about 2 o'clock. This was the hour that I went out on my afternoon round of professional calls, and I agreed to go in the next day to see the patient. I went the next day directly from my office across the street and found the young man looking well enough, but the action of his heart was certainly above the normal.

Well, I attended him for several months, his condition remaining much the same. I found my visits to him a relief, for instead of talking about his ailment he seemed to attach little importance to it and chatted lightly on other subjects. Many a time when visiting him I would suddenly discover that my time had been slipping away and I must curtail my afternoon calls.

Indeed, there were times when I found I had neglected some important case. One afternoon when our meeting had been especially delightful my patient said to me:

"I have told you a great deal about my heart, but you have told me nothing about yours. Mine beats wildly whenever I see you go out on your round of afternoon visits. At other times it is normal. In other words, it has beat for you ever since I first saw you leave your office. I would know if yours does not beat for me."

I rose with dignity, not to say irritation, and replied:

"Do you mean to tell me that you have been fooling me all this time?"

"My heart is affected."

Opposing currents struggled within me. I was vexed to have been treated like a—well, like a woman instead of a physician. Nevertheless I could not keep down a delicious sensation that I was loved. However, I maintained a professional stow.

"My time," I said curtly, "is as valuable when visiting one whose intention is to make a fool of me as a patient who needs me. I shall make you pay for this."

MR. PRIGMORE'S ASSURANCE.

(Original.)

The ice season was on, and a party of young men and women were taking advantage of it for skinning the icy surface of one of those little bays lying along the coast of Long Island. There were Harry Morro, Marjorie Kent and Guthrie Prigmore. There were a lot more, but these three are the only ones who figure in this story. Prigmore was rich, domineering and one of those reckless men whose recklessness is usually folly. With women he counted for far more than he was intrinsically worth. Morro was modest and though cool, had a very keen appreciation of danger, especially of that attending ice boating. Nevertheless he was fond of sports, and of no sport was he more fond than this same gliding over ice on steel runners.

Prigmore had joined the party at the Bayside hotel, a stranger to most of them. He had not been there six hours before every girl set her cap for him. This didn't matter much for any of the men except Morro, who had been attentive to Miss Kent, and they were supposed to be on the eve of an engagement. When the party left the hotel and went down to the ice boats it was expected that each of the men would take out a girl and that Harry Morro would take Marjorie Kent. What did Prigmore do without consulting preferences but hand Marjorie over to a boat and get on himself. This assurance was just what captured the girls, and Marjorie couldn't help casting a coquettish glance at her lover, as much as to say, "Isn't it nice to be preferred by this splendid fellow to all the others?" Harry looked anxious.

"Have you ever run an ice boat, Mr. Prigmore?" he asked.

"I was born on one," Prigmore replied, "and letting out the sail. He started, as he was bound to do in everything, to lead the party. He hadn't gone a hundred yards, however, before his sail jibed, the boom just grazing Marjorie's head.

Most of the couples stopped to watch the favorite. A strong wind was blowing from the east, and Prigmore and Miss Kent were well out on the ice when they were observed trying very hard to do something, but what was not apparent.

"Great heavens," exclaimed Morro, "paling, the sheet's fouled the tiller! He can't bring her up into the wind."

On the opposite shore the breakers had broken up the ice and were rolling in on the sand. If the occupants of the ice boat failed to release the sheet, they could not bring the boat up into the wind and they would go over the edge of the hard ice and be pounded with the broken pieces on the beach. But with the wind pulling on the sail they were not likely to get it back to disengage the sheet. Morro jumped into an ice boat and started after them.

Now began a race between life and death. Morro was an expert ice boat man and knew how to get the best speed out of his boat. He was watched anxiously by the party on the shore, who kept the chased boat in view as well. From the start he gained, but could not catch the couple before they shot over the edge of hard ice. The only advantage he had was that their efforts somewhat retarded the speed of their boat.

In time Morro got within a hundred feet of them, they being within some 600 feet of the breakers, both boats going at a terrific speed. The sight before them was awful. The breakers rolled in, throwing up the anchor ice, dashing it down, then sucking it under the foe for another break.

The opposite shore stood looking on in ghastly silence. Near and nearer Morro approached the yacht he chased, and at last they could see him, as they supposed, fouled with it. Then the two boats began to spread apart, the sheet of Morro's being eased off and making a sharp turn in which only a considerable weight over the raised skate kept the boat from going over.

Morro had steered his yacht along side of the other. Prigmore, without waiting for Marjorie to save herself, made a jump and caught a projection on Morro's boat. Morro reached for Marjorie and drew her safely over the gap. Then, directing her and Prigmore to get on the windward side, he spun his boat around sharply and put her before the wind. A crack in the ice like a pistol shot behind the runners made every heart stand still, but the headway saved them, and in ten seconds more they were out of danger.

The sight of the abandoned yacht shooting over into the broken ice and pounded with it gave them a shudder, and they drew a deep sigh of relief.

Sailing before a fresh wind, it was not long before savor and saved approached the party standing on the shore, who gave one yell of welcome, the men throwing up their hats, the girls wailing.

When they left the boat Marjorie Kent fell on the neck of one of her girl friends, hid her face and trembled. Prigmore's assurance had given place to a ghastly look of terror. Morro bustled himself lowering the sail of his boat.

There was something in the narrow escape that deterred the women from venturing on the boats, and the party returned to the city. Morro was too generous to tell of Prigmore's having saved himself in place of Marjorie. Marjorie tried to keep the secret, but failed. Prigmore had come into the party like a rocket and had gone down like its stick. He was not seen again by any of them.

FLORENCE NORTON.

A STRANGE SENTENCE.

Punishment For Murder That Was More Cruel Than Death.

In 1801 a man died in the Catskills who had been condemned by one of the strangest sentences on record. Ralph Sutherland was born in 1701 and lived in a stone house near Leeds. He was a man of violent temper and morose disposition, shunned by his neighbors and generally disliked. Not being able to get an American servant, he imported a Scotchwoman, and, according to the usages of the times, virgally held her in bondage until her passage money had been refunded.

Unable to endure any longer the raging temper of her master, the girl ran away. Immediately upon discovering her absence the man set off in an angry chase upon his horse and soon overtook her. The poor woman never reached the house alive, and Sutherland was indicted and arrested on the charge of murder.

At the trial he tried to prove that his horse had taken fright, run away, pitched him out of the saddle and dashed the girl to death upon the rocks, but the jury did not accept the defense, and Sutherland was sentenced to die upon the scaffold.

Then came the plea of the insufficiency of circumstantial evidence and the efforts of influential relatives. These so worked upon the court that the judge delayed the sentence of death until the prisoner should be ninety-nine years old.

It was ordered that the culprit should be released on his own recognizance and that, pending the final execution of his sentence, he should keep a hangman's noose about his neck and show himself before the judges of Catskill once a year to prove that he wore his badge of infamy and kept his crime in mind. It was a more cruel decision than the sentence of immediate death would have been, but it was no doubt in harmony with the spirit of the times.

The Ralph Sutherland lived. He always lived alone. He seldom spoke. His rough, imperious manner had gone. Years followed years. At each session of the court the broken man came before the bar of justice and silently showed the noose that circled his neck.

At last his ninety-ninth year came, the time when the court had ordered that the most penalty of the law should be executed. For the last time the man tottered before the judge's bench, but new judges had arisen in the land, new laws had been made, old crimes had been forgotten or forgiven, and there was none who would accuse him or execute sentence. Indeed, the awful restriction that had bound his life so intimately to the expiation of his crime was now legally removed.

But the spirit of self-punishment continued, and when Sutherland, after he had passed his hundredth year, was discovered dead, alone in his house, his throat was found to be encircled by the rope which had been placed there nearly three-quarters of a century before.

A Vacation.

A certain scientist in the service of Uncle Sam at Washington is said to be a hard taskmaster to both his official and his domestic servants.

Being detailed once to accompany a scientific expedition on an extended cruise, the scientist is said to have unbent a trifle in communicating the news to his personal attendant.

"Henry," said he, "how would you like to go with me around the world?"

"Do we go from east to west, sir?" asked the man.

"Yes."

"And we lose a day going that way, do we not, sir?"

"We do."

"Then, sir, I should like very much to go. It would give me a day off."—Harper's Weekly.

Town Cleanliness and Town Godliness

The time is most opportune for the further agitation of a modern sewer system for Sonoma. We have advocated it continually and will continue to do so until the municipality will assure Sonoma's future by giving it the proper sanitation. Public sentiment strongly favors a sewer and the leading men of the town concede it to be the most important local issue of the day. We trust this sentiment will crystallize in the coming election and that the lucky winners of the two plums on the municipal tree this April will be men pledged to take up this most important matter of the town health. All will concede that good air is as important a matter as bad whiskey, for we have to swallow the former while the latter can be bottled up. It is furthermore safe to say that epidemic-breeding ditches are not a very good testimonial to our citizenship. Godliness we may not have until all the earth be perfect, but cleanliness we may have and must have. Let us therefore concentrate on this issue and be as a unit in seeking to get trustees who will take immediate steps toward laying a definite proposition before the voters.

The outgoing city fathers have given us a handsome city hall but we don't want to see it stacked with burial permits which will certainly be the result if with increasing population we continue to dump our filth in our yards and public streets. City cleanliness is as important as public morality and by antagonizing one element of our progressive citizens we are apt to hamper for years a public improvement that affects every man, woman and child in our midst. Let the wave of temperance reform sweep over us when we have first cleaned up the filth at our feet. We must give and take in this world and for the good of the greatest number and the ultimate success of carrying a sewer system proposition let us not become divided into factions over a matter for which there is no present grave necessity for radical legislation. If the saloon man can get hold of any silurian money that will enable him to stand the taxation for an improvement like this he is of more good to the community than the silurian who puts his money on the plate every Sunday and goes to the polls to vote against bonding his city for town health. Reward the meek before you punish the sinner, for why should the former be dying off while you quibble over high license and such issues? If fight we must over this proposition let it be in a clean and sweet atmosphere where there will be no excuse for the use of liquor to counteract deadly germs.

The Church and Anarchy.

ANARCHY has antagonized a powerful factor in its deadly thrust at the Catholic Church. Hitherto temporal power has been the object of their brain-crazed fanaticism but now it is shown by the assassination of the Denver priest that ecclesiastic power is held to be as hostile to their doctrines as the laws of monarchs. In their attack on the former, however, they arouse a stronger sentiment than even loyalty or patriotism itself, for the cold-blooded, and wicked crime against the church is held to be most terrible sacrilege. The State may punish but it cannot be the avenger that the church can against the promulgation of such doctrines as anarchy. Religious zeal is more intense perhaps than any other sentiment and anarchy will realize that it has met a powerful foe. The co-operation of church and State should tend to stamp out this deadly serpent which has so recently taken the lives of Portugal's prince and king and a highly respected member of the clergy in our own country.

The attack on club women from time to time is entirely without foundation for everything in the clubs which are admitted into the Federation tends to up-lift and enlighten the fair sex. Ministers probably decay because of their tendency to broaden the view and to take away active workers from church work to other lines of activity. Club life does not wean women away from the church but it causes them to share their time and money with other phases of life's work.

It was a plain case. The judge saw through it and on the level, he hammered it so that the jury fled out, took a brace, and nailed the offender.

The New County Court House

The steel frame of the new Sonoma County Court House has been completed with the exception of the dome. The iron workers have raised their boom to the roof of the building preparatory to beginning work on the dome, and within a short time it will be in place. The riveters are advancing rapidly with their work and will not be far behind the iron workers in finishing after the dome is in place.

Rapid progress is also being made in placing the frame forms for the concrete which will form the walls around the steel which is now up. Already the work has progressed well into the second story on the east and a portion of both the south and north sides of the building. The wire foundation for a portion of the floors of the first story is also in place. Press Democrat.

LEG FRACTURED BY FALLING HORSE

J. Bethune Meets With a Serious Accident Thursday

J. Bethune, the well-known manager of Goldstein's Mt. Pisgah Vineyards, Agua Caliente, met with a serious accident in this place Thursday afternoon.

He rode one of his saddle horses into town in the early part of the day and tied him to the hitching rack alongside the Union Hotel. While Mr. Bethune was eating his noonday meal in the hotel the horse suddenly broke loose from the rack and ran wildly down Napa street. The animal was finally secured but became very fractious when Mr. Bethune mounted him to return to his ranch. Opposite the Union Stables the horse, refusing to respond to the bit, suddenly reared backward and with the rider still in the saddle fell prone upon his back, carrying Mr. Bethune with him, breaking his left leg between the knee and ankle.

Dr. G. W. Hayes, who was near at hand, was sent for and had the injured man removed to Green's sanitarium where the broken limb was set.

The break is a bad one and will lay Mr. Bethune up for some time. A cart that happened to be standing in front of the Union Stables was also demolished by the falling horse.

Re-registration

Voters desiring to exercise the right of the ballot at the Presidential election next Fall would do well to see that their names are on the Great Register for 1908. The law now compels a new registration for every general election and to be on the safe side of the proposition it would be well to register as early as possible and before the municipal election in April, as there is a doubt as to whether the registration for the last election will hold good for municipal elections.

ROY STOCKWELL

BURGLARY CASE

Defendant Held by Judge

Seawell to Answer the Charge Will Enter

Plea Monday

Roy Stockwell was arraigned in Judge Seawell's department of the Superior Court last Wednesday and was held to answer to the charge of burglary. He was given until Monday to enter his plea.

The defendant is out on a $250 bail bond, furnished last Sunday by Dr. A. M. Thomson and B. E. Darling.

The Annie E. Gibson Estate.

Jas. W. Gibson, only son of the late Annie E. Gibson of Glen Ellen, has applied to the Superior Court of this county for letters of administration on the estate of his late mother. Mrs. Gibson just previous to her death decided to the petitioner her entire estate. Recently Geo. E. Guerne applied for letters on the same estate and in his petition declared the estate to be valued at $6,000. Just where this part of the estate is no one appears to know unless it be Guerne. If such an estate does exist Mr. Gibson, as an only son and heir, declares it should go to him and to no one else, hence his application for letters of administration in opposition to those filed by Guerne.

Got Out of Town and Invested Elsewhere.

Mr. J. Vincent, formerly proprietor of the Swiss Hotel in this place but who was forced out of business six months ago, as he claims, by the unjust exactions of the new liquor ordinance, has just about completed a new building on Riverside avenue, El Verano, in which will be opened on May 1st a butcher shop and a restaurant. Mr. Vincent did not fancy the exactions placed upon his business by the ordinance in question so got out of town and invested his coin where he considers his investment safe at least from interference by over-zealous official reformers.

Will File Briefs in Suit Against City.

The civil suit instituted against the City of Sonoma by Jas. C. O'Rourke and eighteen other business men of this place, again came up for argument before Judge Seawell in the Superior Court of this county last Monday. The demurrer was argued and briefs were ordered filed. The plaintiffs were represented by Thos. J. Butts of Santa Rosa and the defendant city by attorneys Robt. A. Poppe and Frank Sprague of this place. The suit is attracting much interest here.

Free Flower and Vegetable Seeds.

Congressman Duncan E. McKinlay has had forwarded to this office from the Department of Agriculture at Washington, D. C., a quantity of flower and vegetable seed for free distribution. Parties desiring a package of these seeds will please call at this office.

The Native Daughters.

A movement is on foot to organize a parlor of Native Daughters in this place. Mrs. M. V. Chase will receive applications for charter members and when the necessary number of names have been secured the parlor will be instituted.

The New Directors of the California Home.

Jos. P. Berry, the well-known attorney of Santa Rosa, is one of the newly appointed directors of the California Home at Eldridge. The new appointee, who succeeds director Irvine, was at one time Assistant District Attorney of this county and stands high in his profession. Mr. Berry is a son-in-law of Mr. Frank Koenig, the well-known proprietor of the Union Hotel of this place.

The other appointee is director Fear of Berkeley, who succeeds Robt. A. Poppe, as stated in these columns last week.

MRS. M. C. GAINES DIES IN SACRAMENTO

Formerly Resided Here and Was Mother of Mrs. Geo. Breitenbach

Mrs. Mary C. Gaines, formerly a resident of this place, died in Sacramento Monday at the age of 67 years.

Mrs. Gaines was a member of the M. E. Church, a devout Christian and a good woman. During a fifteen years' residence here she made many friends among our people who sincerely regret her demise.

Mrs. Gaines was the widow of the late Richard Gaines, who died many years ago, and mother of Mrs. Geo. Breitenbach, Mrs. C. Batendener, Mrs. Jennie Evans, Walter and Clark Gaines. She was born in Indiana in 1841.

The remains were shipped from Sacramento to Windsor in this county, where the funeral was held Sunday, the remains being laid to rest in the quaint little village graveyard in that place. Thus has passed to her reward a kind neighbor, a fond mother and a good woman.

Took Two Shots at an Imaginary Burglar.

On Tuesday evening last about 8 o'clock Mrs. A. Girotti, a widow residing with her two sons on Napa street nearly opposite the Catholic church, had a bad scare from which she has not yet recovered. The youngest boy, about 14 years of age, rushed into the house and informed his mother and brother that he had heard the door of the tank house, located alongside the residence, open and close. The latter, arming himself with a pistol, saw or imagined he saw, the crouching form of a man in the tank house and fired two shots at him. Mrs. Girotti, upon hearing the shots, rushed to the phone and in a tremulous voice called Deputy Sheriff Ryan up and informed him there was a burglar on the premises and to hasten to her assistance. The officer was soon upon the ground, but after a thorough search for the offender, dead or alive, laconically remarked, "nothing doing." The intruder had either made good his escape before the arrival of the officer, else he existed solely in the mind of the excited youth who blazed fruitlessly away at the apparition, as not even a trace of gore was to be seen anywhere.

Succeeds C. Aguilon.

Mr. A. Froment, the well-known wine man of Glen Ellen, has leased the premises of the late C. Aguilon on First-street West, and will conduct therein a family liquor store on the same lines as the same was conducted for many years by the late owner. Mr. Froment will inaugurate a free delivery service and will make a specialty of supplying families with the very best of foreign and domestic wines and liquors. Mr. Froment is no stranger in this valley as he has resided for many years in Glen Ellen and is highly respected. At present he is a member of the High School Board from the Dunbar school district.

The New Jail.

Two steel cells are being set up by Wm. Rambo on the lower floor of the New City Hall. These will take the place of the stone cells in use for many years in the Old City Hall.

THIS IS SAID TO HELP MANY

Get from any prescription pharmacist the following:

One-half ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion, one ounce Compound Kargon, three ounces Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla. Shake well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and again at bedtime.

The above is considered by an eminent authority, who writes in a New York daily paper, as the finest prescription ever written to relieve Backache, Kidney Trouble, Weak Bladder and all forms of Urinary difficulties. This mixture acts promptly on the eliminative tissues of the Kidneys, enabling them to filter and strain the waste matter from the blood which causes Rheumatism.

Some persons who suffer with the afflictions may not feel inclined to place much confidence in this simple mixture, yet those who have tried it say the results are simply surprising, the relief being effected without the slightest injury to the stomach or other organs.

Mix some and give it a trial. It certainly comes highly recommended. It is the prescription of an eminent authority, whose reputation, it is said, was established by it.

A druggist here at home when asked stated that he could either supply the ingredients or mix the prescription for our readers, also recommends it as harmless.

INSULTS TO ROYALTY.

Many people think that leze majesty—giving insult to royalty—is not a crime in Great Britain. The English statute books, however, contain many penalties for such offenses.

Placing a postage stamp on a letter upside down is a punishable offense, as is also the defacement of a coin bearing the royal image. This is insulting the king's effigy.

Private individuals may not raise the royal standard over their dwellings. This is the emblem of the royal authority to be displayed only where the king is present.

While an agitator may talk against royalty in the abstract as much as he chooses, contemptuous or insulting personal references to the reigning sovereign opens the offender to a heavy fine and imprisonment.

The slightest slap upon the face of the king or queen—or any other part of the anatomy, for that matter—is punishable with the death penalty. In the reign of Queen Victoria a Lieutenant Page struck her across the face with his cane. He was sentenced to death, but the queen commuted his sentence.

It is likewise a crime to bring the uniform of the sovereign into contempt. To garb a low comedian or a villain of the stage in a discarded uniform of the army or the navy is sufficient to bring heavy censure from the government. For this reason theatrical managers usually see to it that the uniforms worn are not exactly copies of the real things.

ARTIFICIAL LIGHT.

The Most Brilliant Illumination Is Not Always the Best.

A writer in an engineering magazine offers some disconcerting information on the subject of illumination, disconcerting because the reader will probably find that he has been, innocently enough, following a course of procedure there described as injurious. For instance, in the case of eye strain he may have felt that even the dim light by which he worked was too strong, and so turned down the light, thus increasing the difficulty, or what is more likely to be the case, when the strain has been caused by too brilliant illumination he fancies that what is needed is stronger light and so increases it.

Overstrain from too bright a light is said to manifest itself by an itching sensation in the eyeballs, with a tendency to rub the eyes for relief. The proper course, then, is to see that the light is more perfectly diffused or softened and that it falls in the right direction. After these precautions have been taken it is worth while to try a smaller quantity of light, this trial to continue long enough in time for the eyes to become fully adjusted to the change. The value of illumination is not to be judged by the apparent brightness of the lights when looked at directly—the brighter the light the better—but by the effect on the object to be looked at, and the most desirable effect, so far as the eyes are concerned, is not always produced by the most brilliant lights.—Indianapolis Star.

Set the Pace.

Young Mabel had a habit of musing her crackers or bread in it until it was a great mess. Her mother made many efforts to have her correct this strictly primeval habit.

One day there was to be company at the table, and the mother said:

"Now, Mabel, Mrs. Brown is to dine with us tonight, and I want you to act at the table just as nicely as she does. Please don't 'mush' your soup."

Mabel promised faithfully to follow the example set by Mrs. Brown, and the dinner opened with every promise of a fine time. However, Mabel was using a pair of very sharp eyes on Mrs. Brown and in an instant blurted forth at the top of her voice:

"Oh, mamma, Mrs. Brown is 'mushing'! May I?"

Had Tried Electricity.

A benevolent gentleman attempted to converse with the motherly old lady who sat next to him in the railway carriage. He discovered that she was very deaf, and the conversation was established by shouting.

"You are very deaf, aren't you, madam?" ultimately belovely he of the benevolence.

"I am so," was the reply, "and haven't been able to do a thing for it."

"Have you ever tried electricity?" shouted the kind hearted man.

"Yes," she said, nodding vigorously. "I was struck by lightning last summer."—London Graphic.

How She Felt.

Stella—So you kissed the young parson in the dark hall, thinking it was your brother? You must have felt awfully cheap when you discovered your mistake. Mabel—Cheap? Why, I felt like a Friday remnant at a Monday bargain sale.—Chicago News.

Pleasant and Most Effective

T. J. Chambers, editor, Vindicator, Liberty, Tex., writes Dec. 25, 1902: "With pleasure and unhesitatingly, I bear testimony to the curative power of Ballard's Horehound Syrup. I have used it in my family and can cheerfully affirm it is the most effective and best remedy for coughs and colds I have ever used."

Pearls of Crinoline.

The dangers of the historic crinoline are illustrated by a story told by Lady Dorothy Nevill in her "Reminiscences." Going too near the fireplace, her voluminous skirt caught fire, and in an instant she was in a blaze. There were no men present, and the women could not help her, because if they had gone near enough to be of use they own skirts would have been ignited. Fortunately Lady Dorothy had sufficient presence of mind to roll herself in the hearth rug and thus subdue the flames.

A Judge of Land.

Proud Father—Welcome back to the old farm, my boy. So you got through college all right? Farmer's Son—Yes, proud Father—Ye know, I told ye to study up chemistry and things, so you'd know best what to do with different kinds of land. What do you think of that flat medder there, for instance? Farmer's Son—Cracky, what a place for a ball game!—Kansas City Independent.

Neglected Colds Threaten Life

[From the Chicago Tribune.]

"Don't trifle with a cold," is good advice for prudent men and women. It may be vital in the case of a child. Proper food, good ventilation, and dry, warm clothing are the proper safeguards against colds. If they are maintained through the changeable weather of autumn, winter and spring the chances of a surprise from ordinary colds will be light. But an ordinary light cold will become severe if neglected, and a well established ripe cold is to the germs of diphtheria what honey is to the bee. The greatest menace to child life at this season of the year is the neglected cold. Whether it is a child or an adult, the cold slight or severe, the very best treatment that can be adopted is to give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is safe and sure. The great popularity and immense sale of this preparation has been attained by its remarkable cures of this ailment. A cold never results in pneumonia when it is given.

One Gift She Missed.

Six-year-old Harry wanted to buy his sister a little birthday present. His heart throbbed with joy at the thought, though he had in his pocket only 10 cents. Nevertheless a week ahead of time he went around the shops and came back with a very satisfied look. His mother asked him what he had bought.

"I got her a cream puff," he said. "Well, you know, Harry," said his mother, "that won't keep fresh for a week."

"That's what I thought after I bought it, mother," replied Harry calmly, "and so I ate it."—Ladies' Home Journal.

How Fast He Could Go.

A breeder and trainer of race horses who is known almost as well in England as he is here recently sold a horse to an Englishman. The Englishman before paying for the horse quibbled a bit about the price and then said:

"You know, I'd like to see the horse first just to see how fast he can go."

"Never mind about that," said the trainer. "He can't go any faster than I can tell it."—New York Sun.
